This feature-length documentary investigates the dangerous culture that allowed abuser Larry Nassar to operate for so long, and the organizations that prioritized winning over child safety. Using a mix of original and rarely seen archival footage, At The Heart of Gold examines a culture that silenced young women for decades and how they fought to reclaim their own narratives. The film puts the survivors' stories at the forefront, following their fight for accountability from the powerful institutions that failed them.

A reception will follow.

This special screening is presented without charge. RSVP required. Register now at:
