YOUNG ADULT LITERATURE THAT TEACHES THE IMPORTANCE OF IDENTITY, HISTORY, AND CHOICES

A partnership of the Museum of Tolerance and Facing History and Ourselves

Stories have the power to transform the way young people see themselves and others. Set in the experiential Museum of Tolerance, this special workshop uses Red Scarf Girl, The Diary of Anne Frank, Wonder, and other literary resources to examine ways to engage youth in thinking about identity, analyzing adolescent choices, and reflecting on the impact of history on individuals. The workshop will equip teachers with practical literacy strategies by using rich primary sources and historical background materials along with interactive strategies for teaching memoir as informational text. Participants leave with common core aligned strategies to educate and empower their students.

Completion of this institute qualifies participants to access all of Facing History and Ourselves' resources including:

- Coaching from Facing History staff
- Publications for download
- Online network
- Free lending library
